

Indiana University School of Social Work Constitution

Preamble

The mission of the IUSSW is excellence in education, research and service to promote health, well-being, and social and economic justice in a diverse world. We envision our School as an exemplary university and community-based collaboration advancing social and economic justice, empowerment, and human well-being in a changing global landscape.

The Indiana University School of Social Work was founded in 1911 as the Department of Social Service and is recognized as the oldest professional school of social work continuously functioning as part of a degree-granting university. Between 1911 and 1944, various administrative and curricular changes were put into effect, and degree programs at both the undergraduate and graduate levels were offered. In 1944, the Indiana University Division of Social Service was established by action of the Trustees of Indiana University. The organizational status was changed in 1966 when the Graduate School of Social Service was created. In 1973, the name was changed to the School of Social Service in recognition of the extent and professional nature of the school's graduate and undergraduate offerings. It became the School of Social Work in 1977.

In June 2007, the School became the new home of Labor Studies making it an undergraduate program of the School of Social Work. Labor education at Indiana University began in 1946 with the Labor Education and Research Center within Bloomington's Department of Economics, which provided instruction on topics vital to Indiana union leaders to assist in their roles in collective bargaining and leadership in their local communities. The first Labor Studies credit courses were offered in 1976 as a concentration component of the General Studies degree program. The Division of Labor Studies of Indiana University has set the standard for labor studies programs nationwide, pioneering the first bachelor's of science degree in labor studies in the United States.
